HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THIS?

By GERTRUDE CRONIN

Tribune-Star Apr-7-46

QUITE an interesting collection of old letters, some of which date back to the Revolutionary War and Civil War days, has been assembled by George Standley Buckner, shift supervisor in riboflavin down at Commercial Solvents, who as an avocation for the past twenty-five years has been on the lookout for interesting letters to add to his collection begun by him as a youngster of nine.

The other afternoon Mr. Buckner showed us his collection which he has mounted within a huge frame and on which is mounted not only his old letters of interest but old coins as well. In speaking of his collection Buckner said:

"The earliest letter in my collection of folded letters dates back to 1786. It is interesting to note that the postage prior to 1792 was in the denomination of shillings. After 1792 it was in dollars and cents.

"This is an interesting letter. It is, more or less, a business letter, as it quotes prices of commodities at that time. Sugar it seems was selling for sixty-five shillings. West Indies rum was selling from four shillings to four shillings and eight pence. It is signed, 'Your most humble and obedient servant.' It is addressed to Nicholas Law, a merchant who dealt in such commodities.

"It was as a youngster of nine that I began my collection. The collection has grown through trading with and buying from other collectors as myself.

"This next specimen is a personal letter. It tells of a shipwreck and came from Wilmington, North Carolina. You will probably observe as you look at my letters that as far as their penmanship is concerned there is a great deal of flourish in signatures.

"Proud I am that I have letters from each of nine of the Colonial Colonies. From each of the following nine colonies I have a letter: North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut and New Hampshire.

"Camp Reading was the point of origin of this letter which was written April 2, 1779, by General Joseph Leigh. In this letter he writes that the New Hampshire legislature has recently passed a bill which is to provide provisions and clothing for the soldiers. It mentions that wheat is selling for $20 to $25 a bushel.

"Included among the letters and autographs from the Revolutionary War era is a letter of James Sullivan. This letter written by James Sullivan who was governor of Massachusetts, is dated 1783. The author of this correspondence was a man of repute. He was a member of the Provisional Congress of 1775, a member of the General Court of 1775, a justice of the Supreme Court of 1776, judge and state's attorney during the period from 1776 to 1782, and governor of Massachusetts from 1807 to 1808. Of especial interest is his mention that the 'State of Green' stands true.

HIS HOBBY LIKE HISTORY.

"This is a letter from General Walter Stewart who had the reputation for being the handsomest man in the Continental Army. The contents of his letter don't seem a bit outmoded especially when one comes to a mention of buying and selling of stocks.

"Here is a letter the author of which was General John Glover who was commander of the Marblehead Boys. Students of history will, no doubt, recall that he was an aid of General Von Steuben. It is a signed piece of note paper.

"The oldest letter which was written prior to the beginning of our postal system and which was carried by hand is dated January 10, 1769. It is signed by C. C. Pickney, who will be remembered for his much quoted slogan, 'A million for defense but not a cent for tribute.' It refers to Brigadier General Benjamin Lincoln, who was a collector of revenue of the ports. This correspondence, dated of the year 1799, was also signed by James Lowell, a naval officer. The document reads that 'permission is hereby given to ship 2,344 gallons of gin.'

"Another is signed by Timothy Pickering whom, it will be remembered, was secretary of state under President Adams. It is a signed request directed to the Port of Bedford, Conn., collector.

"The author of one of these specimens of correspondence holds the distinction of having held a political office with every government from the English government onward. His name was Trench Coxe. His unique political career had its beginnings in 1776, when he turned loyalist and joined the British Army under General Howe. He was arrested, paroled and then joined the patriots. In 1780 he served as commissioner to the federal convention at Annapolis. Later he became a member of the Continental Congress serving from 1787 to 1788. Following his joining the federalist party he was appointed assistant secretary of treasury to serve during the years 1789-1792. When that office was abolished in 1792 he was appointed revenue commissioner which job he held until removed by President Adams. Not to be outdone, he joined the democrat party and was thereafter appointed purveyor of public supplies to serve in that capacity during the years from 1803 to 1812. He wrote on politics and for a reason, I know not, he was called the Father of the Cotton Industry.

"Of the Continental currency which I have collected one sixth of a dollar is the smallest denomination. Each bill is signed, and some of the bills are even countersigned. The denominations range from one-sixth of a dollar to one-third to one dollar, two dollars, four dollars, five dollars, six dollars, seven dollars, eight dollars, thirty dollars, forty dollars and fifty dollars. The earliest currency in my collection is dated November 29, 1775. The currency was minted during the years from 1775 to 1778. This currency caused the comment to be made that 'it was not worth the paper it was printed on, for it had no hard money backing.'

"Here in this collection of pennies is a Virginia one-half cent minted in 1773 which has inscribed on it the bust of George III. The first coin to show Washington's likeness is this coin minted in 1783. It was struck while Washington was president. At that time the penny was being circulated.

"Note that E Pluribus Unum is on this New Jersey one cent piece minted in 1786. This Connecticut one cent piece struck in 1787 shows the figure of Liberty and the wording is, 'Independence and Liberty.'

"The first coin designed by Benjamin Franklin in 1787 was struck by the authority of the United States government. It is interesting from a historical standpoint to know that no coins previously struck had been struck with the authority of the U. S. government. On the coin is designed a sundial with the thirteen links which are representative of the thirteen states. The latin inscription which it bears when translated means 'Mind Your Business.' This Massachusetts one cent piece, minted in 1788, bears the likeness of an Indian with bow and arrow.

"This New York one cent piece struck in 1784 has the wording, 'Liberty and Commerce.' Well, this about sums up my current collection which I have mounted within this frame. I have some other materials which I have collected, but I have not gotten them into any permanent form as yet."

When asked to give us a few biographical facts about himself and charming young wife, Mr. Buckner replied:

"I am a native of Monroe, Louisiana. I was graduated from Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, where I majored in chemistry. I came to Terre Haute early this year to assume my duties as shift supervisor in riboflavin at Commercial Solvents.

"Mrs. Buckner is the former Rhea Rivet, a native of New Orleans, La. We have two children and make our home here at 1663 North Eighth street."
